

I am in a legal conflict with the Columbia University, and I am hoping the National Association of Scholars will take my side. I sent an email to the University Chaplain offering to give a learner-centered lesson on the arguments for God's existence to students and faculty of Columbia. The handout I would use in such a lesson is attached.

The Chaplain's response was to get the Department of Public Safety to threaten me with legal action if I contacted any of the "Religious Life Advisors" that the Chaplain appointed. The rejection of my offer and the threat were not in writing, but were orally made. I responded with a letter sent to the Chief Counsel of Columbia dated 9/23/16 and an email to the President of Columbia dated 9/22/16. See:

Since you are presumably committed to the NSA's "Issues and Ideals," I am hoping you will join my campaign to get the American Journal of Physics to retract an article about evolution and thermodynamics that criticizes a Christian apologist's mistaken ideas about this topic. The article disgraces every physicist in the United States because it includes an absurd calculation. Americans have a right to know how irrational the scientific establishment is about evolutionary biology and religion. See:

I had a two-hour interview with James H. Fetzer on May 16. It was his 200th show and is titled, "Science and Religion."
