

David Roemer <david@dkroemer.com>

Message sent to Carol Tavis

Social Psychology Network <noreply@socialpsychology.org>

Sat, May 23, 2015 at 8:50 AM

Reply-To: David Roemer <david@dkroemer.com>

To: david@dkroemer.com

I reviewed your book on Amazon.com on September 9, 2015 ("Cognitive Dissonance and the Shroud of Turin"). The review is also at <http://ezinearticles.com/?Cognitive-Dissonance-and-the-Shroud-of-Turin&id=8716559>.

There is a more direct and personal connection between us because you are on the editorial board of Skeptic Magazine, and I have been communicating with Jim Dominic and Michael Shermer about an egregious case of cognitive dissonance. The aspect of reality that is causing so much stress and anxiety is an absurd article about evolution and thermodynamics published by the American Journal of Physics. On the Skeptic Forum, I have been trying to explain why the article disgraces every physicist in the United States.

I tried to do this on the forum of the American Scientific Affiliation, which is a Christian organization. The Executive Director, Randy Isaac, has a PhD in physics and writes about evolution. Randy promised to "walk me through the second law of thermodynamics" so I could understand why the AJP was not wrong. The exchange between us quickly degenerated, and I asked Robert Kaita to assign a moderator. He refused, and I was expelled from the group for contacting its members directly. My correspondence about this is at <http://www.pseudoscience123.com>.